Creator:

Kenison, Arthur, E. 1880-1946

Language:

The materials in this collection are in English.

Extent:

17 large boxes, approximately 25 linear feet.

Abstract:

The Arthur E. Kenison Papers consists of correspondence and documents from the creator's legal practice in Ossipee and Conway, NH, from 1919 to 1946. Kenison's practice appears to have been a general one that did not include criminal or family law cases; the papers concern bankruptcy, real estate and probate/estate work.

Access and Use

Acquisition Information and Provenance:

The Arthur E. Kenison Papers were given to the New Hampshire Historical Society by the creator's grandson, Frank E. Kenison, in 1997.

Collection Overview

Biographical Information:

Arthur Kenison was born on March 9, 1880 in Bartlett, NH. He was married to Isadore Gertrude Rowe. Kenison served as an attorney in Ossipee, NH, and Conway, NH. He was also Clerk of the Superior Court in Ossipee and held an active role in the New Hampshire Bar Association. His and Isadore's son, Frank Rowe Kenison, went on to become Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New Hampshire. Kenison died on July 8, 1946 in Conway, NH.

Collection Scope and Content Note:

Attorney Arthur E. Kenison's client records between 1920 and 1946 (bulk 1925-1946) contain correspondence between Kenison and his colleagues and clients. His practice in east central New Hampshire (Conway, Ossipee, and environs) was concerned primarily with real estate, wills and estates; the papers contain many property searches and abstracts. Kenison was a locally important attorney and was retained by his neighbors and fellow citizens as well as by wealthy “summer people,” property owners whose primary residences were elsewhere. The records illustrate both good and hard times, as Kenison bought property and settled estates for summer people in the financially flush 1920s and also later responded to local and summer people in financial trouble during the depression of the 1930s. The papers documenting estate settlements after a testator’s death offer rich information about the costs of goods and services at the time they were created because administrators were required to inventory material goods as well as pay for and keep records of services provided by physicians, nurses and other care givers, grave diggers, and many other people involved in winding up the affairs, even of people of modest means. Kenison’s files also document occasional human dramas: arguments over inheritances, contested wills, decisions about how to care for incapable people or minors, divorces (rare), and accidental deaths (also rare).

When the deceased client had owned a retail business, it, too, was inventoried in great and painstaking detail, with value given for each individual item. For these, see:

Box 3, folder 21: Craig -- a general store in 1941-1942

Box 5, folder 10: Foster -- a dry goods store in 1922-1924

Box 6, folder 25: Grundle -- a Western Auto Supply Store in 1945-46

Box 13, folder 25: Stanley -- a physician’s office in 1934-1935

Box 15, folder 11: Volk -- an artist’s paintings by himself and others, 1935

Box 16, folder 34: White Mountain Camps – contents of buildings and outbuildings in 1932.

Kenison was the attorney for White Mountain Camps, which accounts for the single largest section of the papers (28 folders), 1925-1932. These concern the struggle of the camp to remain solvent and the eventual sale at auction of the property, buildings and contents of the buildings. There is an inventory for the sale.

Kenison handled settling the New Hampshire estate of artist Stephen A. Douglas Volk (1859-1935). Volk’s papers are held by the Archives of American Art.

There are little ephemera in the collection; there are posters advertising estate sales and auctions. These are noted in brackets after the entry.

There are a few photographs of properties for sale. They are noted in brackets after the entry.

Kenison’s business records (Series II) consist entirely of checkbook stubs (1938-1947) and part of a ledger (1925-1936).

There is no information about Kenison’s personal life or activities in the collection.

Arrangement:

Series I: Client Records

Series II: Business Records

Materials in Series I are arranged alphabetically by client name. The original files were in no particular order within the name; the current arranger has filed the correspondence chronologically by year and month (but not always by day within a month). In general, correspondence is filed first, followed by legal documents (deeds, etc.) and financial papers (receipts, etc.).

Folder titles have been copied from the originals, including information in parentheses. Dates have been supplied by the arranger and are the approximate range of dated materials in the folder. When folders within a name are labeled 'part 1, part 2,' etc. it is because the original file was too big to place in one folder. When bills, checks, correspondence, receipts, etc. are stapled together, they are in bundles/groups as found. Arranger comments are in brackets. []

Series II: Business Records consist of Kenison's checkbook stubs from approximately 1938 to 1947 and a ledger from approximately 1925 to 1936.
